XD app follows the sketches created for last weeks assignment.

The first page, you hit anywhere but the play button to go to the second page where you can flip the switch or click false to continue. If you flip the switch, you are brought to the game over screen, and if you hit "turn on the lights?" you are brought back to the home page. If you click false, you are brought to the "you've won" page that has a picture of a cat. If you click anywhere on this screen, it brings you to a page asking why you are still there, and if you click again, it brings you back to the home page.

Because most of the button pressing and switch flipping gives an unexpected result or works in an unintuitive way, I think that this successfully fulfills it's duty of being a nonsense app.